

Day 1 of Two Day ASL Challenge 2015

Patti Durr

SI5s it's better to light a candle than curse the darkness

Shawn Elfrink

Just hitting on the road to ASL Pride and playing with my art from my photos on iphone.
Fun. — at St. Clairsville, Ohio.

Takiyah Harris

"Patrick overcame his communication barrier"

Patrick is from Africa and he is 15 years old. He had no language for 15 years until the mentor came to see Patrick at his home. Patrick appeared a very sad and didn't understand what the people tried to communicate with him. His father continued to point at something and taught him to work at the farm. His father didn't want Patrick to participate in the sign language class with the other students.

Patrick arrived to the class late and was defensive to learn sign language. His mentor gave him more time until Patrick stared at other student and was able to show his effort to signing more.

Medium: haptic art

The link: <http://youtu.be/AHfC6jqBhkk>

http://youtu.be/5f31_UbCPq4

Storme Ren Heidi

I am too slow for my autism awareness day and ASL pride a couple of days ago, still wanted to shine light on us. This is my 'be you-nique' picture. Unique and you-nique play to the auditory the same but i love the phrase "be you", and to hold dear the qualities in others that are different is unique. I went ahead with the sometimes distasteful phonetic thing as it is still playing to my eye. Forgive me if it bugs ya!

ASL is Children's Human Right

Hinda Kasher

#ASLchallengeDeVIA

2015

Heidi Howard

Untitled

Explanation: This drawing is utobiographical. Empty sleeves below are waiting for the new generation or new members of Deaf community.

The girl (me) has left all of her assistive devices behind. These are the devices I had growing up. I don't wear aids anymore. When I discovered ASL and Deaf community all my fears of being alone and isolated disappeared. I knew I would always have a place in the Deaf community. It felt safe.

Pratigya Shakya

LOOKING "SIGN LANGUAGE"